

Dubai Duty Free

WORTH FLYING FOR

SHOP AT DUBAI DUTY FREE

Full of surprises.

SHOP ONLINE

WORLD | EUROPE

Catalonia Leader Pushes on Vote for Independence

Demonstrations headed into a fourth night after the country's highest court sentenced independence leaders to jail

Protesters take to the streets after Spain's high court sentence nine Catalan pro-independence leaders to nine to 13 years over their roles in an illegal referendum in 2017. PHOTO: MATTHIAS OESTERLE/ZUMA PRESS

By Margherita Stancati and Pietro Lombardi

Oct. 17, 2019 5:18 pm ET

BARCELONA—Catalonia's secessionist leader Thursday pledged another referendum on independence from Spain, after days of clashes between police and protesters left hundreds of people injured.

Thousands of protesters have taken to the streets since Spain's highest court on Monday sentenced nine Catalan pro-independence leaders to between nine and 13 years in jail over their roles in an illegal referendum in 2017.

The verdict has revived tensions surrounding the long-held hopes by many Catalans for independence from the rest of Spain. Those aspirations culminated in the 2017 referendum, after which separatist lawmakers declared the region's independence. That move prompted Madrid to take control over the region.

Separatists have planned a general strike for Friday to protest the verdict and renew their call for an independence vote.

"If we have been condemned to 100 years in prison for putting out ballot boxes, the response is clear: We'll need to put the ballot boxes out again for self-determination," Catalonia's regional leader, Quim Torra, told lawmakers.

Thursday marked the fourth night of protests. Several boulevards were shut to traffic and police vans were parked throughout the center of Barcelona, the regional capital. Helicopters flew overhead. Many taking part expected more protests to follow.

RECOMMENDED VIDEOS

1. China Woos Foreign Companies While Serving Its Own Agenda

Xavier Trilla, a 40-year-old Barcelona resident, said he would welcome another independence vote if citizens were really free to cast their ballot.

“What would be amazing, really, would be a normal referendum without police so that we could find out what people really want,” said Mr. Trilla.

Episodes of violence and vandalism have become more common in the lead-up the general strike.

Riot police and protesters clashed on Wednesday night. Dozens of trash cans and cars were set on fire, and police said protesters threw rocks as well as acid at them. Fireworks targeted a police helicopter without causing significant damage.

At least 350 people have been injured, including over a hundred members of the regional police force, according to authorities, who said 72 people have been detained. The regional government and separatist leaders have condemned the violence, blaming it on infiltrators.

The protests have placed the issue of Catalan secession once again at the heart of Spain’s political debate as the country prepares to vote in parliamentary elections next month.

The vote pits acting Prime Minister Pedro Mr. Sánchez’s incumbent Socialists, who espouse a conciliatory approach to Catalonia, against center-right opposition parties and far-right Spanish nationalists who have been calling for a tougher stance.

Mr. Sánchez’s hopes to reduce Catalan demands for secession through dialogue and potentially greater autonomy for the wealthy region, which already manages its own education and health-care system. But growing tensions between the regional government and Madrid are testing this approach.

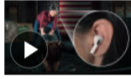

“The state will always uphold the rights of those who demonstrate peacefully. But it will not tolerate the imposition of violence,” he said Wednesday.

Write to Margherita Stancati at margherita.stancati@wsj.com and Pietro Lombardi at Pietro.Lombardi@dowjones.com

WSJ opens select articles to reader conversation to promote thoughtful dialogue. See the ‘Join the Conversation’ area to the right for stories open to conversation. For more information, please reference our community guidelines. Email feedback and questions to moderator@wsj.com.

WHAT TO READ NEXT...

- 2. How Toys ‘R’ Us Went Bankrupt
- 3. McDonald’s Next CEO Will Struggle to Keep Up the Strong Performance
- 4. AirPods Pro Fit Test: How Well Do They Stay In?
- 5. American Women and Children Killed in Mexico Highway Attack

MOST POPULAR ARTICLES

- 1. Saudis Back Travis Kalanick’s New Startup
- 2. Michael Bloomberg Preparing to Enter 2020 Democratic Race
- 3. How Google Edged Out Rivals and Built the World’s Dominant Ad Machine: A Visual Guide
- 4. His World Collapsed the Night the Berlin Wall Fell. Then Came the Hard Part.
- 5. China Says Tariffs Will Go, but U.S. Doubts Remain

MORE FROM: REVIEW & OUTLOOK ×

Targeting Mark Zuckerberg

As St...
Credibility

- Not So Fast, Mr. Trump! Relocating to a Low-Tax State Is Hard to Do
- Blackouts, Fires, High Gas

HEARD ON THE STREET

Square's Cleanup Still Leaves Questions

TECH

Qualcomm's Earnings Slump Shows Signs of Easing

Backouts, fires, high gas prices: Who wants to live in California today?

How Google edged out rivals and built the world's dominant ad machine: A visual guide

Ukraine company's campaign to burnish its image stretched beyond Hunter Biden

Should your cat be vegan?

Why it might pay to delay planning holiday travel

Pence Europe adviser says political aspect of Ukraine call surprised her

In divided Hong Kong, apps help to avoid eating with the enemy

California enjoys respite from fires, but more danger looms

TAX REPORT

Not so fast, Mr. Trump! Relocating to a low-tax state is hard to do

FILM REVIEW

'Marriage Story' review: The pain of parting

Independent of The Wall Street Journal newsroom

MARKETS

Here are the most accurate S&P 500 predictions of the year, so far

MANSSION GLOBAL ARTICLE

Oceanfront Estate in Laguna Beach With 11-Car Underground Garage to Hit Auction Block Next

Independent of The Wall Street Journal newsroom

MARKETS

Here are the most accurate S&P 500 predictions of the year, so far

MarketWatch

MANSSION GLOBAL ARTICLE

Oceanfront Estate in Laguna Beach With 11-Car Underground Garage to Hit Auction Block Next

BACK TO TOP

Subscription Options

Contact Us

Guides

Commercial Real Estate

MORE FROM REALTY & OUTLOOK

Why Subscribe?

My News

Place a Classified Ad

Targeting Mark Zuckerberg

Corporate Subscriptions

RSS Feeds

Sell Your Business

Professor Journal

Video Center

Sell Your Home

Student Journal

Watchlist

Recruitment & Career Ads

News Archive

WSJ High School Program

Podcasts

Register for Free

